Greatest Love Letters of All Time? God, I hope not. To be honest, while it was interesting to read some of the letters, I found that I wouldn't classify most of them as even being love letters. Just because a letter ends with one or two romantic lines or the words "I love you" doesn't really make it a love letter. Perhaps it's merely my own ...

A love letter written by Beethoven was found in his personal belongings shortly after his death. Written in early July of 1812, the letter is addressed to an 'Immortal Beloved.' Who was 'Immortal Beloved?' There has been plenty of speculation over the years with the top choices being Antonie Brentano, who was the daughter of a diplomat, and Josephine Brunsvik, a countess whom he deeply ...

It is a love which is a religion, since the object of love is regarded as a divinity, with all the devotion and affection which turn the greatest sacrifices into the sublimest joys. Such a love you inspire in me, and such a love you will someday feel for me, although to my sorrow you do not feel it now. Your soul is incapable of an angelic love. It may be, therefore, that only an angel can ...
